CAMP FOR UNEMPLOYED DECLARED NECESSITY FOR PRESERVATION OF ORDER AMONG WORKERS

County to be Asked to Assist Cities in Caring for Itinerants; $1000 Will Be Asked at Next Meeting

In spite of the assurance of San Mateo, Burlingame and Redwood City that these three major peninsula cities would take steps to carry out their own relief work this winter, the San Mateo County Employment Committee Tuesday afternoon decided that at least one army-type camp will be necessary to meet the emergency.

The matter will be carried to the supervisors Monday.

Mayor Matthew A. Harris of Atherton, chairman of the county relief group, led a determined fight in favor of the shelter. He was backed up strongly by J. F. Cambiano, representing the building trades, but met with equally firm opposition from Chief C. L. Collins of Redwood City.

Mayor Harris made a direct request to the three members of the board of supervisors present for $1000. Chairman Manuel Francis, and Supervisors John Poole, Redwood City, and Rosalie Brown, San Mateo, individually assured Mayor Harris that they would lend the employment group all the assistance possible, but said they would confer with the two other members of the board before promising that the $1000 can be obtained from the unbudgeted reserve. It will require four votes to take this sum from the general fund.

Supervisor Poole suggested that the group set up a definite plan for the camp, outlinging what it is to contain, how it is to be run, who is to be kept there and for how long, and what the cost is to be, and to submit this report to the board of supervisors Monday. This Chairman Harris and his fellow relief workers agreed o do.

The most stirring report in the two-hour debate came late in the day, when it began to appear that no definite action would come of yesterday's meeting.

Cambiano, commenting on the limited stay set for the itinerants in any one camp or community said this army of unemployed contained thousands of honest workmen who were tired of being herded abut and resent it. "Strong arm tactics are a thing of the past," he said. "Shelter shoes, clothing and food must be provided the hungry job hunter."

Thousands Headed West

He said reports from the eastern cities were that thousands of jobless workers were heading west to the warmer states in a desperate attempt to obtain employment so that the families at home could be supplied with common necessities. Cambiano declared as high as 90 per cent of workers in some building trades were out of work. Eighty thousand carpenters alone, he said were lost by the unions in September because these men were unable to meet their dues.

Deputy Sheriff C. A. Callaghan warned of the dangers of "red" uprisings which might result because "labor is easily led" in times of unrest, and warned also of the danger of epidemics which might result from thousands of men living in creek beds in insanitary conditions. These men, he said, might spread infections by their house to house canvasses for food.

Chief Collins' objection was based mainly on the ground that the spread of word from itinerant to itinerant that San Mateo county had established a relief shelter would bring a lot of undersirables into the peninsula communities.

Harris' feeling that the camp should be established, however, was based principally on the condition in the lower peninsula area, particularly at Menlo Park and the San Francisquito creek sector. This is brought about because the southern peninsula cities have not jails as has San Mateo, Burlingame and South San Francisco, which lock up the itinerants for the night and move them on to San Francisco or Santa Clara valley points the next day.

State, National Aid Seen

The chairman declared that the state and federal governments have promised to supply the cots and blankets, and that San Mateo county, with the cities co-operating, will build and equip shelter and will gather and distribute the food and clothing.

Harris declared the camp could be closed "in a day" if it were found unsatisfactory. He said the danger that many unemployed would be attracted here by the camp was overestimated, because these men preferred to stay in the cities which afforded better chances to obtain food, and shelter was more certain because of vacant warehouses and like quarters.

Others who spoke and offered suggestions were:

Sheriff James J. McGrath, Chief Thomas Burke, San Mateo; Mayor A. R. Cotton, San Mateo; Chief John J. Harper Burlingame; Mayor C. A. Buck, Burlingame; Mona Christiansen, East Palo Alto; Chief Frank Love, Menlo Park; Mayor Daniel R. Stafford, Redwood City, and Judge Jean B. Hoss, Menlo Park.

Courses Offered For Scout Leaders

With many boys awaiting assignments to Boy Scout Troops in San Mateo County, Grant Marsh, Chairman of the county training committee for leadership, has sent out today the call for volunteer leadership.

For the puropse of training new leaders in Scouting work, a scout leaders' training course for the county will be conducted by Edward A. Barrier, county field executive, at the guild hall of St. Paul's Episcopal church, located at Occidental avenue, and El Camino Real, Burlingame. The first session will be held at 8:00 p. m. on Thursday evening. Active participation will feature the course rather than passive listening to lectures. The course will provide the elementary knowledge of Scouting to the new volunteers and to the more experienced men it will bring a wealth of recreational activities and advanced knowledge in troop management.

The institute is conducted under the national training plans. Enrollment is absolutely free of charge and applications for admission to the course are taken at the local scout headquarters, by John W. Rhoda, 806 Arguella street, Redwood City. In regard to the present Boy Scout situation in the county, Charles J. Eldridge, chairman of the San Mateo county district, said:

As nearly all existing troops enjoy a maximum membership, new ones must be formed to accommodate the "rookies." They cannot be formed until men are ready to take charge of them, as each troop must have a scoutmaster, assistant scouetmaster, and at least three committeemen.

"Any male citizen of the United States who is over 18 years of age, and if of good moral character, will be gratefully enrolled by Filed Executive Edward A. Barrier. While it is desirable that the scoutmaster should have as much preliminary training as possible before he assumes charge of a troop, many "outdoor' men who understand boy nature, are qualified for such leadership.

Each leader is responsible for the executive of the Scout program in his troop and for the morale of its members. He works under the general supervision and in co-operation with his troop committee and the local council. Each leader is authorized to select his assistants.

"Any man who voluntarily gives a portion of is time and energy to helping develop boy character through the medium of the scout program, is an American citizen with highest ideals of citizenship, as he trains others to uphold the truest standards of democracy.

"The Scoutmaster is amply rewarded by the satisfaction of knowing that, through his efforts boys who otherwise might be roaming the streets of the town are roaming the hills and woods and breathing the healthful air of the big outdoors."

County Seout headquarters are located at 1204 Burlingame avenue, Burlingame.

Work Begun on Bayshore Road At Palo Alto

Contractor Begins Operations At Bridge Across San Francisquito

Work on the grading of the Bayshore highway in this area was under way today when a crew of men using a tractor began operations at the newly constructed bridge over San Francisquito creek in East Palo Alto.

The contractor doing the job is Basich Brothers, winner of the contract for grading and paving the unit of the new road from Redwood slough to Oregon avenue. The price bid was about $406,000.

The crew doing the grading will work toward Oregon avenue from the bridge. Although the contract calls for completing the job within 200 days, it is announced that every effort will be made to finish it as soon as possible.

The statement was made today at the office of Col. J. H. Skeggs, district engineer of the state highway division, that no decision has been made as yet as to whether the Bayshore highway in this section will be open to traffic on the day of the " big game," November 21, but it is considered likely that at least a portion of it will be.

Plans are being made for continuing construction of the Bayshore road next year from Oregon avenue in Palo Alto to the junction of the Mountain View-Alviso roads, for which funds are available.

160,000 Out of Work in State

1127 Said to be Unemployed In San Mateo County Others Laid Off

By MELVIN LORD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACROMENTO, Cal., Oct. 29 — While state and local agencies are seeking an unemployment relief program, there are more than 160,000 persons "ready to go to work" at a moments notice.

A survey on file with the state division of labor statistics and law enforcement shows there is at least 161,687 persons looking for jobs, while 28,172 have been laid off without pay and only theoretically have jobs.

California, with a population of 5,677,251 and "gainful workers" totaling 2,500,969, very apparently faces the task of finding more work for its citizens.

San Mateo county, credited with a a population totaling 77,405 of which 33,003 are "gainful workers," has 1,127 persons completely out of work and 182 laid off "without pay," according to the survey.

While the official estimate of unemployed is placed at approximately 200,000, other sources throughout the state put this figure even as high as 300,000 as the result of recent developments.

"Those included in the classification 'looking for work' comprise approximately 3 per cent of the total population, or 6 per cent of the gainful workers of the state,' the report claims. Those having been laid off without pay constitute 1.1 per cent of the gainful workes."

From the standpoint of California cities with a population of 500,000 and over, Sacramento has the most unemployment. Representing a virtual "clearing house" for labor in northern California, it is estimated that 6.1 per cent of the population is "looking for work." Berkeley's rate in this particular classification is lowest, being placed at 1.9 per cent of the population.

While both sexes are affected, there are aproximately seven men listed as "gainful workers' out of work for every woman seeking employment, it is estimated.

San Bruno Wife Says Life Was Threatened

Her husband went on fishing trips with other women, untruthfully accused her of "intimacy with other men," and made threats against her life, Mrs. Laura Nuno alleged in her suit of divorce from Charles Nuno, San Bruno sign painter, filed in married in Hollister in 1922. She said Nuno is earning over $300 a month, and asks $200 a month for support of three minor children.

D. E. O'KEEFE RESUMES EDITORSHIP OF THIS PAPER ON NOV. 1ST

S. L. Netherton and John Isaac Retiring From Newspaper Work Here With The Present Issue

In connection with the sale of their interests in the Redwood City Standard, which was purchased this week by the Tribune, S. L. Netherton and John Isaac, who for the past ten years have been publishing this paper, will also retire in that capacity, and management will be resumed by the owner, Mr. D. E. O'Keefe.

Both Isaac and Netherton became associated with the Times-Gazette early in 1922, and shortly afterward leased the business from Mr. O'Keefe as publishers, in which capacity they have continued until this week.

In resuming the editorship of the Times-Gazette, Mr. O'Keefe takes up the burdens which he laid down in 1922 when he was appointed as United States Assistant Appraiser in San Francisco, after having managed the paper since he acquired it in 1893.

During the management of Mr. O'Keefe the Times-Gazette was one of the most ardently Republican journals of California, and much of its space has been given to the principles of the Republican party, and in serving its ends.

Mr. O'Keefe is one of the best known publishers of the state, and is popularly known as the dean of publishers of San Mateo county.

The Times-Gazette is the oldest paper in San Mateo county, having been established in 1859 shortly after the formation of this county. It at that time served all of the territory between San Francisco and San Jose.

The Times-Gazette has made it a policy to work for the best interests of Redwood City, and especially the merchants of this city, and has steadfastly declined to accept advertising from other cities, if the business advertised was in competition with local business houses. It has made it a policy to employ only those who made their homes in Redwood City, and has consistently worked for the upbuilding of this city wherein it was printed.

Ship For Base At Sunnyvale Given to Navy

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 29.—(UP)—The dirigible Akron, largest craft ever to leave the ground, was in the navy today, after formal commissioning at the naval air station here last night

While John Philip Sousa's band played "The Stars and Stripes Forever" and "The Ride of the Valkyries" over the radio from New York, Capt H. E. Shoemaker, commandant of the station, turned the airship over to its commanding officer, Lieut. Com. R. E. Rosendahl.

In a radio broadcast from the hangar, Lieut. Com. Rosendahl said he believed it will not be long after the Akron's projected sister ship, the ZRS-5, is completed, 'when airships even larger than the Akron will be running on scheduled commercial trips across both oceans."

Other speakers were Paul W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation, which built the Akron, speaking from New York; and Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams on board the historic frigate Constitution at Baltimore.

Speaking in the hangar after the broadcast, David S. Ingalls, assistant secretary of the navy for aeronautics, said:

"We are convinced this ship is of great value for scouting at sea. Sustained by non-inflammable helium and defended by many machine guns, as well as figting planes carried within her, she will not by any means be a vulnerable target.

"In addition to her important naval value, she gives promise of being a forerunner of a new means of commercial transportation over the sea. In this ship, the navy department feels it has justified the confidence placed in it and that soon lighter-than-air ships will be a well established means of national defense and commercial transportation."

Changes Planned In Assembly of State Capitol

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Oct. 29 — (UP)—California's legislature is going to "go modern" if the interim committee on legislative procedure has anything to say about it.

The committee, which already has cutlined an extensive program of changes to be inaugurated at the state capitol, is scheduled to attend the sixth annual conference of legislators to be held in Buffalo, N. Y. November 9, 10 and 11 when they hope to learn a few more innovations in the matter of making laws.

The group includes Assemblyman Robert L. Patterson, Taft; Harry F. Sewell, Whittier and Eugene Roland, Oakland; C. W. Booth, Sacramento, is secretary. Fred B. Wood, legislative counsel, also will attend the national conference.

The members of the committee plan to visit several state capitols to make comparisons with other states in connection with the proposed changes in California.

The program they have in mind for re-furnishing, redecorating and re-equipping the asembly chamber includes acoustical treatment of the walls and ceiling, an indirect lighting system, electrical roll call and page call system for the members, individual telephone connections for each desk as well as other mechanical devices "to make the assembly chamber second to none in th world."

It is the contention of the committee that the improvements will cost no more than $50,000, while it is anticipated that the increased efficiency will permit a saving of between $50,000 and $100,000 each biennium.

Booth, in his trip east also plans to visit state printing plants to make comparisons which may prove helpful in attempting to reduce the California legislative printing costs which have grown tremendously during the last few years.

The entire survey of legislative procedure is to be submitted by the committee to the legislature. In the event of a special session it would be presented at that time and, if approved, would permit improvements before the next regular session, committee members stated.

In Parting

With the publication of this issue of the Times-Gazette the undersigned will sever a connection of ten years with this paper, and draw to a close a decade of most pleasant relationship with the people and the merchants of Redwood City. In laying down this burden, it is with a feeling of deep regret that these business associations must draw to a close, but a hope that the many personal friendships arising out of these associations may continue. The past ten years have been happy ones for us, and our relations with the owner of the Times-Gazette, Mr. D. E. O'Keefe, have been most pleasant. In ceasing our connection with him on the paper we wish to take this opportunity to wish him long years of health and happiness and unbounded success in his administration of the affairs of the Times-Gazette.

Stanley L. Netherton John Isaac.

Feel Discouraged?

"It is a gloomy moment in history. Not for many years — not in the lifetime of most men who read this paper — has there been so much grave and deep apprehension; never has the future seemed so incalculable as at this time. In our country there is universal commercial prostration and panic, and thousands of our poorest fellow-citizens are turned out against the approaching winter without employment and without the prospect of it.

"In France the political caldron seethes and bubbles with uncertainty; Russia hangs as usual like a cloud, dark and silent, under the horizon of Europe; while all the energies and influences of the British empire are sorely tried, and are yet to be tried more sorely, in coping with the vast and deadly Indian insurrection, and with its disturbed relations in China.

"It is a solemn moment, and no man can feel an indifference (which, happily, no man pretends to feel), in the issue of events.

"Of our own troubles no man can see the end. They are, fortunately, as yet mainly commercial; and if we are only to lose money, and by painful poverty to be taught wisdom —the wisdom of honor, of faith, of sympathy and of charity—no man need seriously to despair. And yet the very haste to be rich, which is the occasion of this wide-spread calamity, has also tended to destroy the moral forces with which we are to resist and subdue the calamity."

The above is part of an article appearing in Harper's Weekly October 10, 1857 — seventy four years ago.

For those who tend to occasionally lose faith, the above is consoling reading, and for those who remain unshaken, it will reassure you that your judgment is correct. The principal lesson on reflection to be gained from this article written seventy-four years ago is to realize that the United States is still here today better than it was then after passing through other vicissitudes in the interim, but only because those who have gone before us kept faith and worked harder in each period when it was clear to their minds that work could and would surely bring success. What could be written today for today was written seventy-four years ago and again applies in every statement made.

If you at times feel discouraged, you can gain much by carefully digesting this article.

An American Plan

President Hoover has evolved an American plan for business resuscitation. It is predicated on a voluntary organization much like the way finance board, handling a revolving fund of half a billion dollars. This organization will aid banks in liquidating four billions of frozen assets, thus getting money into business channels.

But the President's plan goes further. It looks toward the liberalization of rules to permit reserve banks to handle a wider variety of securities, and the strengthening of the federal land banks. Thus the plan is designed to aid not only business but also industry and farming. Manifestly the success of the plan depends on co-operation, and the test of co-operation will come with the mobilization of the country's resources, as in World War times. All the more so since the plan can be put into effect and carried out without the aid of congress, the party leaders of which have approved and committed themselves to it. With business and industry again directed by a central committee, and with resources mobilized and employed in thawing out frozen assets, there should soon be a vast improvement in financial conditions.

The Best Education

The value of education and the qualities which constitute education are concisely set forth in a short and simple address made by Premier Ramsey MacDonald of Britain when the George Washington University conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws. Remembering that the premier arose from the humblest beginnings to be prime minister of the British Empire, his words attain the highest significance.

Premier MacDonald said in part in accepting the degree:

"I have been asked to say something to you. What can I say? I never attended a university, unfortunately. I have been as I understand so many of you are here, people who have had to acquire your educational attainments in your spare hours and after having undergone the labor that you find necessary for the earning of your daily bread.

"My friends, my colleagues in academic circles, here, I hope you will never forget that the finest education is the education that has been acquired by daily labor, by saving, not so much money as saving what is still more precious—time and opportunity. It is those moments that pass by us, almost unconsidered, that should be used in attaining to that great satisfaction of mind, that peace of conscience, which comes from making the very best of the opportunities that God has emplanted in our midst.. . . .

"Let us all value education. Let us all appreciate it as something more than mere knowledge because, after all, knowledge is a sort of outward ornament. The education that means our being of finer temper, more adaptable, more flexible. Let us assimilate knowledge until it becomes ourselves, showing itself in character, reliability, straightforwardness. That is the end of education."

Japan's Objection

Japan's objection to the United States' participation in the league of nations' efforts to preserve peace in Manchuria has tended further to complicate the delicate situation which has prevailed since the Japanese and Chinese clash at Mukden. At the same time, it may prove beneficial in showing to Washing the dangerous possibilities which have been generated by America's international aloofness and the necessity for their removal if the cause of world peace is to be served most effectively.

Tokyo's position must not be too severly criticised, especially when it is remembered that wars and rumors of wars probably engulf Japan, that the propoganda mill has been stearily grinding and that the nationalist spirit has obviously been fanned into high flame throughout the land of the setting sun. The United States has heretofore rejected the League of Nations. It is not a member of that body, has spurned membership, but for the privilege of co-operation, of dealing with a situation which concerns members. One wonders what the American government would tell the league in event that body attempted to settle any international controversy in which it was a principal, especially if the clash involved some other next door neighbor, say, Mexico.

Go To Bed

According to a press dispatch, the Russian government, in order to make citizens go to bed, turns off most street lights and doubles the prices of food and drink after 10 p. m. It seems as if the greatest radical experiment ever attempted is determined to revoke all personal liberty and individual rights.

Destroying Wealth

Fire waste represents one of the greatest drains on our national resources. In destruction of life and property, in retarding industrial activity and in causing unemployment, loss of business and higher taxes, it is a financial and social burden that must be borne by the entire citizenry.

"No doubt a large part of the apathy toward fire loss results from the delusion many persons cherish about insurance," said B. W. Gearhart, State Commander of the California Department, American Legion, some time ago. "They believe that insurance pays for fire. It does not, and never can. It distributes fire losses, but is cannot recreate buildings or goods that have been reduced to ashes. Not only is property lost through fire utterly gone, but its replacement draws upon energy which should go into producing wealth. . . Every dollar's worth of property needlessly sacrificed to fire, represents a loss in national wealth not only to the immediate sufferer but to the entire United States."

This is eminently true. No insurance policy can compensate for the suspension of jobs, business, activity. Cases are on record where a single great fire has stopped progress in a community for many years, working an incalculable hardship on all concerned.

It may be lack of understanding of this fact that causes the laxness of the public in co-operating to banish fire hazards from the nation. At present, with business at low ebb, the tragedy of fire waste becomes more than usually evident. Every citizen must do his part in the great war against fire—a part that he should consider his duty.

She prepares to leave for Paris.

But is run down by a taxi and seriously injured.

He prepares to go to London.

Dr. Mac decides to take her home.

Suddenly her memory returns.

She explains the entire situation to him later.

Chapter 59

The Thief

Sheila tried not to show the fear that gripped her when Dr. Mac said that his letter to Constance had been stolen from is desk.

"A breeze may have carried it from the window, or it may have fallen to the floor," she said. "Go back and look again." He returned a few minutes. "It's not there. I looked everywhere. Some one entered my room, when I left to come down here, and stole it."

"Then you must send another at once " she urged. "Tell her what has happend, and warn her to be on her guard."

The sky was overcast and there were flashes of lightning when Sheila entered the roadster to drive to the villa. Before she had left the outskirts of the town, rain was falling. A car, passing her, skidded and forced the roadster into the ditch. The driver alighted and came to her assitance. He was Harry Edmonds!

"Why, Sheila," he cried. "What are you doing here, alone, at this hour of the night?"

"You'll have to take me home," she said, as she surveyed the roadster. "You've sprung the axle."

He threw open the door of his car and helped her in. "Jean," she gasped, as she recognized the other occupant of the tonneau. "What a pleasant surprise! You weren't, by any chance, calling on Dr. Baxter?"

"No," he said, as he moved over to make room for her. "The gentleman does not interest me. But I knew you were there. I saw the roadster in front of the hotel when—"

His voice trailed off and Sheila pretended not to be listening. She sank back into the soft upolstery and drew a rug over her knees. Bellefonte's coat lay on the seat between, and she heard the merest rustle of paper as she spread the rug. Slowly, almost afraid to breathe, she groped for the coat.

Harry asked Bellefonte a question, and the Count leaned forward to hear what he was saying. Sheila's fingers found the breast pocket of the coat. It held something thick and oblong in shape. An envelop! Sheila drew it out slowly, slowly, and thrust in under her arm.

"I'll take you home before I drop shoulder to Sheila.

"Thank you," she murmured, clutching the envelop, "I'm really very tired." Then, a moment later, "Harry, I've done such a stupid thing—left my bag at the hotel. Would you mind going back?"

Dr. Mac was at his desk when the telephone rang, and again Sheila was on the wire. "I have it," she whispered. "The letter! Come down at once."

"The Count's the thief," she laughed. "Mail it immediately I must go now Harry's waiting for me". She blew a kiss and rushed off to the car.

"The Count has deserted us," Harry told her "Seems he lost something too. A paper of some kind, and he went back to see if he could find it. We'll wait a few minutes and then go on." . . . . .

Two days later the letter that had caused all the excitement created still more when it was delivered to Constance. She found it on her breakfast-tray, and her hands trembled so that she could hardly open it. Here, at last, was news of Harry. And what news!

While she had been seeking him in London, while she had been desperately ill, he had been enjoying himself in Paris and in Cannes—in the society of another girl! A fit of jealous rage such as had led to her marriage with Bellefonte seized her now. And there was no one to reason with her. But, even if there had been, it is doubtful if she would have listened.

The incinsistency of her attitude never occurred to her. There was only one thought in her mind—if Harry realy loved her, how could he have been fooled by any one who was impersonating her?

Seating herself at a desk, she scribbled a note to Harry—an incoherent, furious scrawl, telling him that she was married and that she was returning his gifts and letters. She posted the letter herself and then ran up to her room and burst into tears.

"I am mad, I am mad," she sobbed, when she realized what she had done. "Now I deserve to have him hate me."

There was a tap at the door and the nurse said: "A telegram for you, Miss Allen." Constance wiped her eyes and opened the envelop.

"Can you come to Cannes at once?" she read. "Your father expected here shortly." The message was signed "Baxter."

"Please go down to the post-box at once," Constance called to the nurse. "I mailed a letter there a few moments ago, and I want to stop it."

"The posts's been collected, Miss Allen," said the nurse. "It's past the hour now."

"Then help me pack," said Constance nervously. "I'm leaving at once. And bring me a telegraph-blank. I must send a message."

She was packed and gone in less than an hour, and, while speeding on her way to Cannes, Sheila and Dr. Mac were puzzling over a message that said:

"Leaving immediately. Intercept letter to Harry. Vitally important."

Chapter 60

The Conspirators

"What do you make of it?" asked Dr. Mac of Sheila, when they had read Constance's plea that they intercept the letter that she had written to Harry.

Sheila shook her head. "The poor child," she said gently. "She's had another terrible fit of temper and has written something that she now regrets. And to Harry, apparently. Now we have the task of keeping the letter from him"

"We really need the Count in this," mused Dr. Mac. "Let's see, when was this written? . . . . Umm . . . . . Then the letter for which were to be on the watch ought to be here Wednesday. Where is Edmonds staying?"

"At the Crescent.'

"Then Ill move over there for the time. It will make things easier."

"But Constance may go to your hotel; she won't know of your change of address, and you may miss her"

"I'll leave word Anyway, she's not due until Thursday. By then we'll either have succeeded or failed as burglars."

Harry was enchanted at the preference that Sheila showed for his society during the next two days. She saw Dr. Baxter very little and the Count not at all. She walked, drove, rode, danced, and dined with Harry.

Meanwhile, Dr. Mac spent a great deal of time in the lobby of the Crescent, watching for mail deliveries. Harry received a great deal of mail, but very little of it seemed important. He would glance over the envelopes in the morning at the clerk's desk, and would send most of them, unopened, to his room, to await is convenience.

Dr. Mac made a point of being in the lobby when Harry came in to dress for dinner. He would stroll up-stairs with him and smoke a cigarette while Harry took a shower and got into his evening clothes. Then he would find some way of glancing at the letters that were thrown carelessly on the bureau or the desk. It was an obnoxious job, he reflected, but he comforted himself with the thought that he was working in a good cause.

"If only I hadn't been so detailed in the information I gave her about all of us," he would say to himself, "she would never have known where to write him, so it's really something that I brought on myself."

Wednesday night came and still no letter from Constance.

"We'll know, if it comes," Sheila had said. "There won't be any mistake about that. If what she said to him was so devastating that she wants the letter intercepted. Harry won' be able to hide his feelings. Anyway, he'll demand an explanation of me forthwith."

Harry was giving an informal dinner-party that evening at the Crescent, and Sheila and the Baronne and Dr. Mac were among the guests. Sheila gave Dr. Mac a significant look as she saw him in the lobby when she arrived.

"I made my usual canvass, but it revealed nothing," he said. "Let's hope the thing was lost in the mails and enjoy ourselves."

Just before dinner was served, he sought her out in the conservatory.

"I just received a letter by special post from England—from Dr. Gibbons," he said, "telling me that Constance left the hospital against his express advice. Perhaps her letter to Harry was in the same bag. If it was, they'll send it to his room at once. I'm going to make an excuse to go up. Wait for me here."

He returned in a moment, twirling a key. "I told Harry I thought I left my cigarette-case in his room today, and he gave me his key. I'll run up and see if the special post brought him anything. Follow me, after a moment, and wait outside the door."

He bounded up the stairs, and Sheila sauntered carelessly after him. He disappeared into Harry's room, and, after battling with her curiosity for a minute or two, she followed him. He started violently as she opened the door and dropped a handful of letters that he had picked up from the desk. She caught sight of an envelop that bore Constance's handwriting and pounced upon it.

"I'm sure this is it," she said breathlessly. "Can you make out the postmark?"

They were peering at the envelop when there was a quick step in the hall, and Harry strode into the room. His gaze traveled from their embarrassed faces to the letters on the floor, and then rested on the envelop that they had been examining.

Sheila was at a loss for words. She turned and cooly rummaged in the desk.

"I'm looking for a piece of paper."

"Does something in my mail interest you?" asked Harry blandly, ignoring her remark. "Or have you turned stamp-collector?"

He turned to Dr. Mac and said: "Why did you tell me a lie about losing your cigarette-case, when you really wanted to ransack my desk?"

"Harry," Sheila cried indignantly, "he was doing you a service—a great service."

"You might give me the letter that interested you so," he said, holding out his hand. Sheila shook her head and let a pile of little scraps of paper flutter to the floor.

"I wrote you a note, and then I regretted what I had said, so I wanted to get it back, and Dr. Baxter helped me."

"I can guess what you said," Harry flashed. "You were telling me that you won't marry me. . . . . I see it now. You were trying to find courage to tell me that very thing these last few days. . . . It's Dr. Baxter now, I suppose. Well, I won't stay here to be made a fool of any longer. I'm going to leave for London tonight."

SWEDISH FILM POPULAR

STOCKHOLM, — (UP)—Swedish motion pictures are becoming increasingly popular in Sweden, it is shown in a report by the government film bureau. Thus in 1930 this bureau passed on 3,430,393 feet of motion picture film made in the country, against 3,100,000 feet the year before. In all, 13,982,016 feet of film were shown at the bureau in 1930, of which 7,006,676 feet were American. Of this, 200,493 feet were confiscated.

DEER PRESERVES PLANNED

WAUTOMA, Wis. —(UP)—Plans to stock Waushara county with deer, not as a hunting ground but as a game preserve, are under consideration by the county fish and game protective association. Waushara county is not among the Wisconsin subdivisions having an open season for deer hunting in alternate years.

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT

PRIS, Oct. 29.—(UP)—The new crocheted gloves bear the imprint of a superb imagination. They are as delicate and wispy as a cobweb to look at, and yet possess a durable quality—due to the strength of the fine thread with which they are made—that keeps them from being one of those luxuries that we can get along without. We don't need to get along without them because they are practical, pretty and within our means.

They are done in a very small and fine version of the old fish-net stitch. In all the new colors, or rather in all the shades of the three new coors—brown, red and green, and, of course, in black and in white. They reach to the elbow and are extremely smart.

For the woman who goes out a great deal to formal evening galas, but who, unfortunately, has a backbone that disturbs her peace of mind when too prominently exposed, we offer this suggestion. An evening gown, the bodice of which drapes up from the waist and slips over the head like a necklace. The back of the bodice also drapes up from the waist in the form of an isosceles triangle with the apex joining the front bodice at the center of the back of the neck (sounds complicated but is quite simple). This method of draping leaves the sides of the back exposed rather than the very center of the spinal column.

"Groaners and Quitters" Aid

Detroit, —(UP)—Even the professional grapplers are straining to aid in the drive against unemployment and suffering here. A group of the "groan and grunt" boys are scheduled to appear on a charity card Nov. 6, Hugh J. Ferry, chairman of the event announced. Funds raised will be used to buy food and clothing for needy children.

Turkeys Abandon Old Custom

BASTIAN, Va., —(UP)—Sportsmen here are interested in the fact that turkeys placed on Round Mountain lately by the State Game Department have been found roosting on logs, making them easy prey for animals, instead of sleeping in trees, according to ancient turkey custom. A small dog was taken to the mountain and made to chase the turkeys, after which they began to fly to trees.

Coffee Can Was Still

ASHEVILLE, N. C.,—Oct. 29.—(UP)— one-pound coffee can was used as "thump-keg" in a vest-pocket size still found by sheriff's officers near here.

Graphic Picture Of Lusitania Sinking Given

Memories of a pitifully small number of lifeboats tossing on the Irish channel in the mist of a May morning, 1915, still haunt B. S. Allen, who was an American newspaper correspondent in London at that time.

Mr. Allen, who was assigned to cover the tragedy, and who helped to identify a number of the bodies, gave a vivid account of the disaster at a dinner meeting of the Redwood City Exchange Club this week. He is now a resident of Palo Alto

The speaker told how parents were separated from children, husbands from wives, friends from friends; how they stormed the three improvised morgues in Kingstown in search of loved ones; and how the city, unprepared and not dreaming of such a thing, was hard pressed to cope with the situation.

Reports of Jones' Return Incredible

Rumors that Bobby Jones will seek reinstatement as an amateur and seek to regain his British and United States golf campionships are making the rounds again. What is more, many golfing men profess to believe the reports, incredible as they sound.

The story and you may take it for what it's worth—is that Bobby, having made some quarter-million dollars through his movie contracts, etc., is now prepared to ask the U. S. G. A. to forgive his detour from the straight and narrow confines of true amateurism and to seek reinstatement.

The U. S. G. A. has the power to reinstate Jones, or any other golfer, even though he had become an out-and out professional However, the U. S. G. A. seldom uses this power and always has strictly enforced a rule requiring that the petitioner serve an extended pennance in which he is not allowed to compete as an amateur, but at the same time must not play as a professional. Mrs. Mary K. Browne, who was declared a professional in women's golf because she played professional tennis, won reinstatement last year after five years' absence from the fold of simon-pures.

Recent reports that Jones had accepted a connection with a sporting goods company made it appear that Bobby was widening his breech from amateurism. The reports that Bobby will seek reinstatement as an amateur, however, have it that Bobby will serve in an executive and advisory capacity and thus will be eligible for amateurism. It seems, that under the U. S. G. A. rules, the fellows who are forced to accept positions as salesmen, managers or clerks for sporting goods and golf houses are professionals, but the "executives" who earn the big salaries may remain amateurs. This inconsistency received minor notice a year ago when a golf equipment salesman, who became a star player after making a success of his position, was barred from competing in an amateur tourney at the request of a high official in a company which manufactured golf balls. The salesman was a professional but the "executive" rated as an amateur and was eligible to the highest offices in the U. S. G. A.

That Jones will resort to such subterfuges to regain his amateur ranking is unbelievable to those who know Bobby or is record of straight-laced amateurism in the past. Bobby never was one to evade the rules, as was demonstrated when he refused the gift of a $60,000 home even though the gift probably would have been approved by the U. S. G. A., because he did not consider the acceptance of the gift "in keeping with the spirit of amateurism."

In light of those acts it would seem unlikely that Jones, having made $250,000 from his excursion into the ranks of professionalism, would convice himself that a return to amateur ranks would be fitting.

FRENCH ATHLETES DEMAND WINE FOR OLYMPICS

By Wallace Carroll

PARIS, Oct. 29.—(UP)—France's wine-drinking athletics, alarmed by the prospect of "Orangeade Olympics," have appealed to the French cabinet to help them secure a supply of their native wines at Los Angeles in 1932.

"No wine, no win," adequately expresses the present attitude of candidates for the French Olympic team. In fact, a complete boycott of the Olympics has been advocated unless American prohibition administrators relax the laws in favor of foreign athletes.

It has long been a French axiom that an athletic runs best when there is a bottle on ice in the locker room. ccordingly, the French Olympic committee has been exerting pressure to win the government to its cause, and if necessary may even appeal to the army and navy.

The committee fully appreciates the implications of its efforts. It is realized that if the French team brings its own wine, the English team must be allowed to bring its arf-an'-arf.

Tis would mean that the Dutch team could bring Holland gin and the Japanese could import their own sake. Then if the Soviet Russians brought a few barrels of vodka, a good time would be had by all.

The French atheletes do not want to be high-hat and do not mena to cast aspersions on American liquor. A short time ago, they informally communicated this attitude to merican dry apthorities, expressing the hope that customs officials would overlook a bottle of wine if wrapped in track trunks.

ccording to reports from Washington, however, the authorities replied that if American booze did not make an athlete run like he never ran before, he would not stand a chance in the Olympics anyway.

If the government heeds the plea of the Olympic committee, the battle for the bottle will again be carried to Washington through diplomatic channels. If the full force of French diplomacy is exerted, it is hoped that the Olympics will be made safe for the two-bottle man.

Notre Dame Goes North

Jimmy Phelan, one time disciple of Knute Rockne the Great of Notre Dame, is leading the Washington Huskies through another tough season of coast conference games. His men fell before U. S. C. and OregonU., but fought Stanford, one of the conference leaders, to a scoreless tie amid rain and mud.

"Pop" Warner Faces Tough Week End Game

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Oct. 29.—"Pop" Warner is "on the spot." The venerable gentleman who coaches Stanford football teams is faced with one of the toughest situations of an extremely trying season, this week.

While Howard Jones and his Southern California Trojans are resting Saturday, with no game sceduled, the Indians will be facing the University of California at Los Angeles, "baby" members of the conference. And, judging from reports coming out of the southern city, the baby has been "weaned" and is now training on a diet of raw meat.

Bill Spalding's Bruins are not only determined to beat Stanford but are also confident that they can turn the trick. They have pointed for the redskins since the season opened and are bent on "pulling a Santa Clara" on Warner's men. It will be remembered that in 1927 and again in 1929, the Broncos caught Stanford the week before her Big Game against California and in each case administered a licking. The Bruins see no reason why, with the best team they have ever produced, they cannot sneak up on the Indians while Pop is preparing for Southern California.

Stanford cannot afford to point for the Uclans with the Trojan battle a week later nor can she afford Bruins. Warner's many crippjples and near cripples need a week's rest badly to be in good shape for Southern California. On the other hand, every available ounce of the Indians' strength will doubtless be needed to beat UCLA.

Dick Hanley, who has one of the greatest teams in the country at Northwestern, started a second string against the Uclans and found his boys on their own five yard line before the game had gone five minutes. Hanley sent his regulars in to stem the tide and left them on the field until the last five minutes of the fourth quarter and then only hung up a margin of 19-0.

Indians and Bruins have met four times with the following results: 1925—Stanford 82, Ucla 0; 1928—Stanford 45, Ulca 7; 1929—Stanford 57, Ulca 0; 190—Stanford 20, Ulca 0.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Oct. 29.—Varsity and freshman soccer teams of California and Stanford will meet for the first time this year on the regular soccer field here Saturday. The frosh contest, which is the first of a two game series is scheduled for 9:0 a. m. The varsity game is the first of thre and is to start at 11:0 a. m.

DEPT. OF PUBLIC HEALTH AID ADVISES HOUSEWIVES ON EGGS

SACRAMENTO, Oct. 29.—(UP)—An egg is not always as innocent as it looks.

Recognizing this fact, Dr. W. H. Kellogg, chief of the bureau of laboratories, state department of public health, believes that housewives should know a bit more about this important dietary item..

In these days of keen competition, of long range business, of better transportation and cold storage facilities, the full truth is not always evident in the open countenance of every egg. Some may, notwithstanding a guileless look, have served a considerable term in the 'cooler,' " Dr. Kellogg said.

"While the pure food and drug division stands between the consumer and downright deception regarding the quality of eggs by neforcing their proper labeling, as long as the eggs are not labeled 'good,' 'bad' 'indifferent,' or 'rotten,' it will aid the housewife to know what these grades are and what they mean.

"It is unfortunate that eggs are not automatically stamped by the hen with the date as laid, but since this is a development not yet attained by the modern scientific poultryman, we must have recourse to certain signs of advancing age that are fairly definite and easy to read," Dr. Kellogg stated.

These signs are based on the fact the egg shell is porus and permits exaporation and the loss of moisture is indicated by the increasing size of the aid bubble within the shell. The size of this air cell, as seen with the aid of a light behind the egg, forms a dependable means of grading.

The grades of eggs under California law include specials, extras, standards and trades. Specials must be celan, sound, with no visible germ development and an air cell not three-sixteenths of an inch in depth. Extras may have an air cell not greater than one-quarter inch. Standards may have three-eights of an inch in air space and a germ development slightly visible, and "trades" include all edible eggs falling below these specifications.

The eggs also are grade to size as follows: Large, 1⅞ ounces; medium, 1 7-12 ounces; small, 1 1-4 ounces; pewee, all weighing less than 1 1-14 ounces.

$200,000 PLEDGED BY S. F. TO BREAK COLMA BOTTLENECK

Two hundred thousand dollars were pledged yesterday afternoon by San Francisco supervisors to help break the Colma-Daly City bottleneck in northern San Mateo county. The state will be asked to contribute a like sum, and San Mateo county is to raise $100,000.

The Daly-City Colma section will be 9000 feet from the county line at Mission street and San Jose avenue to Daly City and thence on the old Mission road to Colma. The full width is to be 125 feet, whereas at present it is so narrow in some places as to cause continued traffic congestion.

There has been some work toward acquiring the necessary property and estimates of $400,000 for this purpose have been made. The completed thoroughfare will represent an added cost of $450,000, to be provided, half from the San Francisco good roads fund and half from the state appropriation.

Mayor H. H. Smith of Daly City was present when the board voted the ordinance pledging the money and commended the action.

STATE TRAFFIC OFFICER IS UP FOR HEARING

Insubordination Is Charge; First Case Of Its Kind

In the first trial of its kind under a new state law, Traffic Officer Chester Kreiss of Redwood City, for eight years a member of the San Mateo County Traffic Bureau, Tuesday was tried for insubordination at a hearing in Redwood City.

Kreiss' disobedience consisted of refusal to report for duty at 8 o'clock September 10 at the Five Points intersection under orders from Capt. James B. Logan. Kreiss, then a member of the night patrol, reported to the captain that he had no transportation, but he was told to report anyway. His duties were to be on foot. Kreiss refused, his superior charged.

Captain Logan then filed a complaint with E. Raymond Cato, chief of the California Highway Patrol, under the law effective August 14, which calls for a board of three to hear the charges against an officer.

This board of inquiry, which convened this morning in a basement office of the courthouse, consisted of the following state patrol captains:

H. R. Jacobs of Yolo county.

A. A. Morrison of Stanislaus county.

Leroy E. Galyen of Kern county.

Chief Cato presided at the hearing, during which the testimony of Captain Logan and Officer Kreiss was taken, and any witnesses which they wished to summon. Kreiss had the right of counsel, and John A. McGilvray, attorney for the Department of Motor Vehicles, watched the state's interest.

Chief Cato explained to newspapermen that the purpose of the law is to protect the civil service ratings of state highway patrolmen, preventing their dismissal by a captain without full inquiry into the charges. The purpose of the law is also to "rid the department of politics" and to keep the local officers independent and not in fear of local politicians, Cato said.

The findings of the special board of inquiry will be kept secret by Chief Cato until they are verified. Later this week, it is expected, Captain Logan will receive the report of the findings, and what action is to be taken in regard to Officer Kreiss.

MENLO PARK ADDS SAFETY DEVICES

Traffic Lights And Stop Signs Are Erected

MENLO PARK, Oct. 28—Three projects to improve traffic safety conditions in Menlo Park were under way today.

Installation of the traffic light signals at the intersection of the highway and Santa Cruz avenue was expected by City Engineer Bert J. Mehl to be completed and first tests to be made by late this afternoon.

The city council at its meeting last night approved the recommendation of the city planning commission that stop signs be installed at the city's unprotected grade crossings and ordered four such signs for use at the Ravenswood and Glenwood avenue crossings. This action follows the suggestion made by the Peninsula Grade Crossing Conference.

The ordinance to make Oak Grove and Laurel avenues arterial boulevards was unanimously adopted by the city council.

The traffic signals at the highway and Santa Cruz avenue were ordered by the city council more than a month ago in an effort to provide adequate traffic protection at this busy intersection. Their installation was also requested in a petition signed by more than 100 Menlo Park residents.

Hours during which the signals will be operated have not yet been decided.

HEARING IS SET ON ZONE CHANGES

Menlo Park Council Votes Sum To Repair Pavement

MENLO PARK, Oct. 28. — A public hearing on proposed amendments to the city's zoning ordinance was called by members of the city council at their meeting last night for 8 o'clock next Monday night at the city hall.

Changes in the zoning law as recommended in a report of the city planning commission would allow the construction of clubhouses outside of the business area, permit "class B" (fire-resistant exterior) construction for theatres and auditoriums, allow the construction of frame buildings of not more than two stories in the business district with stucco or brick facing and fireproof roofing and require that construction on the main building be commenced before a permit for a garage be issued.

The planning commission also recommended the issuance of a building permit for a clubhouse in the Stanford Annex district and approved the report of City Engineer Bert J. Mehl on a proposal for the planting of trees in the parkways along improved streets of the city.

Over the protest of City Councilman E. A. Blake the appropriation of $150 for the building up and oiling of shoulders on the curves of Creek drive, Stanford Park, was made by the council on the request of Mehl, who reported that traffic was breaking down the unpaved shoulders on the curves. Immediate work before the commencement of severe rains was declared necessary, but Councilman Blake asked a continuance of the matter for two weeks to allow him to inspect the road.

Bernard C. Feeney Jr. was granted permission to remove a tree in the lot at the intersection of Harvard avenue and the highway to allow construction of a service station there.

An amendment to the city's business license ordinance to require a quarterly license fee of $50 for fortune telling was given its first reading.

BIG GAME DAY TRAFFIC PLANS TO BE DEVISED

University And State Officials To Confer November 11

A conference will be held on November 11 between the Board of Athletic Control at Stanford and Col. John H. Skeggs, district engineer of the state nighway division, for the purpose of discussing all phases of the plans for handling traffic in this general region on the day of the "big game," November 21. Notification to this effect was received today by the local chamber of commerce.

Colonel Skeggs said he was investigating the possibility of arranging for a temporary connection with the proposed Bayshore highway at "some convenient point" in the section between Redwood slough and Oregon avenue; but, he added, it is not possible at this time to say whether such a route can be arranged.

Grading work on the Bayshore highway in this sector is now progressing. The work, however, is not expected to be sufficiently advanced by November 21 to make it feasible to use the new road for the routing of "big game" traffic.

GRADING WORK AT SUNNYVALE BASE STARTS

50 Acres Being Prepared For Huge Dirigible Hangar

Initial steps in the construction of the huge airship dock at the Sunnyvale naval dirigible base were taken today with the commencement of the work of grading more than 50 acres for the hangar. Within four weeks work will be started driving 1,000 piles for the foundation.

More than 200 men will be employed at the peak of the foundation work, according to officials of the Raymond Concrete Pile Company of New York, who have arrived to direct the work on the $181,000 grading and foundation contract.

Preference will be given to local workmen, and all material for the foundation will also be bought locally, it is declared. These arrangements are declared to have been effected by Lieut. Comm. E. L. Marshall, in charge of the base construction, who pointed out that communities in this area had contributed to make possible the construction of the air base at Sunnyvale.

Between 40,000 and 50,000 feet of piling will be driven as soon as the dock site is cleared of fences, trees and two houses, and the ground is graded. No unusual engineering problems are expected to be presented, according to James Thompson, Raymond company engineering representative, who is directing the commencement of the work.

The Raymond company has 180 days in which to complete the work. The same concern built the foundation for the hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., a smaller job than that at Sunnyvale.

THREE HURT WHEN STEERING KNUCKLE ON TRUCK BREAKS

A large truck with a load of stock feed overturned beside the Bayshore highway near the city limits Wednesday, night burying one man beneath the sacks and nearly causing his suffocation, and injuring two others. A broken steering knuckle caused the accident.

Einer C. Jacobsen, Reno, who was "nipping" a ride on the trailer, suffered a possible fracture of the collar bone and a fracture of the right arm, when the truck went off the grade into the marsh at the side of the road. His condition at the Beresford Community Hospital was declared not serious.

J. D. Duncan, driver of the truck, was cut on the face and hands.

H. E. Oftedal of Fresno, Duncan's assistant, was buried in the sacks and was nearly smothered before being rescued by Duncan and passing motorists. He was bruised.

The truck was bound for Fresno. The steering knuckle broke opposite Standish street, and the truck swerved off the busy Bayshore highway, narrowly missing several automobiles in its wild course.

The truck belongs to the Thurber Livestock Company of Fresno.

Chief V. L. Collins and Officers S. E. Douglass, Henry Mengel and Herman Fleishman went to the assistance of the injured.

MENLO PARK

The city council met in regular session Tuesday, all being present with the exception of Anderson.

A communication was read from the planning commission requesting that certain amendments be made to the existing zoning ordinance. The commission also urged that stop signals be placed at all the grade crossings in the city limits, which are four. The council agreed to put up the signals on Glenwood and Ravenswood avenues at once at a cost of $18.

City Engineer Mehl in a communication to the council asked for an appropriation of $150 to be used in repairing the unsurfaced shoulder along the edge of the pavement on Creek drive, and thus preventing further damage. Blake asked that the request be continued for two weeks to give him an opportunity to investigate. He thought such a request was irregular. Mr. Mehl asserted that the work was a necessity to preserve the shouders of the thoroughfare. The request of the engineer was granted on motion of Crane, seconded by Dale, Blake voting no.

Bernard C. Feeney was granted a permit to establish a service station on the South West Corner of Harvard avenue at El Camino Real. He was also given permission to remove a tree near the curb on the property. The owner consented to the removal.

Mary D. Willard in a communication applied for a permit to conduct a palmstry business in the Stewart home on the highway. The communication was filed whereupon an ordinance was read fixing the license for palmstry and fortunetelling at $50 a quarter, Mrs. Willard, who was present, did not urge her application.

A tentative report was read from the planning communication regarding the amending of certain sections of the zoning ordinance. City Attorney Withworth, had the ordinance prepared in accordance with the wishes of the commission. The law will be adopted at the next meeting of the council. As amended the zoning ordinance will permit the erection of theatres, public halls and places of amusements in zones B and C.

This will enable the Italian Family Club to secure a permit to erect a social club hall on Live Oak Lane, for which a permit was sought some weeks ago. The planning commission requested that the permit be granted. The new law also permits the building of class B structures and two story buildings not more than thirty feet in height, fire proof with stucco on exterior and brick veneer. Garages or other out buildings to be constructed until the main building is in course of construction.

The council by resolution, fixed Monday evening, November 2 at 8 o'clock as the time for public hearing on the poposed ordinance.

An ordinance was adopted making Oak Grove avenue and Laurel street boulevards. A stop signal is to be installed at the corner of Laurel and Oak Grove avenue.

City Attorney Withworth called the attention of the council to the uneven surface of the streets in Hermosa Way caused by the contractor who put down the sewers in that district recently. The Menlo Park Sanitary board is to be notified of the affair.

The council adjourned to November 10.

Sequoia, P. A. Lightweight Football Teams in 6-6 Tie

Sequoia and Palo Alto 130-pound football teams played to a 6-6 tie score in their Peninsula Athletic League game yesterday afternoon at Palo Alto. Rather than play off the tie with 10 extra plays, coaches of the two elevens decided that the supremacy of either team can be settled when they play again at Redwood City in three weeks, after each team has played San Jose for the second time.

After a scoreless first half in which neither outfit advanced within the 20-yard line, Palo Alto registered a touchdown in the third period on Jimmy Cuffe's pass to Arrouzet. The play was good for 53 yards, and Cuffe's pass skimmed over Abreu of Sequoia into the arms of Arrouzet, 15 yards from the line of scrimmage. Aided by good interference, the Paly end raced nearly 40 yards unmolested. On the attempted conversion. Cuffe's pass to Siordia fell incomplete.

In the fourth quarter Abreu of Sequoia intercepted a Palo Alto pass on the 50-yard line and ran back to the Viking 40. Line plays by Junker, Neilsen and Lewis carried the ball to the Paly 20-yard line, and Junker went around left end for a first down on the 16. Junker hit the same spot for 11 yards. Lewis gained three yards at left tackle and one at right guard. On the third down he budged over right guard for the tying touchdown. Junker was nailed by Cuffe on his attempt to circle left end for the extra point.

This boy Cuffe was outstanding for Palo Alto, as was Junker for Sequoia. Cuffe's interception of a Sequoia pass and his catch of a forward from Wells were contributions which made possible Palo Alto's chance to score.

San Jose, with wins over both Palo Alto and Sequoia, leads the lightweight league at the completion of the first round. In case of victories for the Vikings and the Cherokees over San Jose in the next two weeks, the league championship will be decided between Palo Alto and Sequoia.

Camouflaged Robbery

BERKELEY, Oct. 29.—(UP)—A man walked by a service station, picked up a stone, hurled it through a window and ran. A crowd gathered. Police were called, informed that a robbery had been attempted. A few minutes later a street car conductor-motorman telephoned police that he had been robbed of more than $50. Upon checking, the police ascertained that the bandit was the man who had thrown the stone through the service station window, thus detracting attention from the real holdup.

Wake Up Your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. ©1931, C. M. Co.

O. S. U. Plans New System Of Education

Permit Attendance From 4 Years of Age to Sheepskin

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 29.—(UP)—A program calling for the establishment of an individual school system at Ohio State University has received the approval of the university board of trustees.

The complete school system is expected to be in operation by 1934, and will include a pre-school, lower school, middle school, ten colleges, and a graduate school.

The pre-school, lower and middle school, under the program authorized, would be operated in conjunction with the college of education. They would be used to demonstrate the latest accepted developments in teaching and to give seniors in the college of education the benefit of the most modern practice. All residents of Ohio would be admitted, conditioned upon the payment of a nominal fee.

The new middle school, now nearing completion on the campus, will accommodate pupils ordinarily attending junior and senior high school.

In operation the plan would permit school attendance at the university from four years of age to the attainment of highest academic degrees.

Detroiter Still Memory Marvel

DETROIT, Oct. 29.—(UP)—"Railroad Jack," or Harry D. Cooper, roadside historian and memory marvel, is back in Detroit after an absence of 10 years. He was once a familiar figure on Detroit streets, offering his fund of knowledge for the coins of the spectators.

Cooper remembers over 10,000 dates in history, and in entertaining the street crowds it was once his custom to offer a $10 prize to the one who could name any event in history with which he was not acquainted. Besides being able to name instantly the day on which every date in the Gregorian calendar has fallen, "Railroad Jack" can trace on a blackboard the route of a letter mailed to any given destination.

Graduated from the streets to luncheon clubs, Cooper has posted $100 reward to any historian, who can compete with him in a memory contest.

Cooper, who is 67, is said to possess a pass to travel on any railroad in this country, hence his sobriquet of "Railroad Jack."

Mule is Guilty of Contempt of Court

A mule stands convicted of contempt of court, and of having assaulted the person and dignity of San Mateo county's junior superior judge.

Judge Swart, so the story goes which is being whispered around the county offices, maintains a fine pair of mules. The mules are fed every morning by the jurist himself, who carries the feed into the corral with a large bucket. Usually the mules come prancing up as Judge Swart approaches the fence and eat the feed as he pours it from the bucket.

On Wednesday morning, however, the mules failed to see the judge until he had emptied the bucket and had refilled it with that by-product of the corrall which is usually used on the garden. Then the mules saw their owner and the bucket containing what they thought was their breakfast.

The mules dashed up in their usual good humor, but when the headmost mule saw what the bucket contained, he decided that Judge Swart had changed their diet, and showed his disapproval in the well-established mule fashion. Judge Swart walked with a limp that day, and his decision with regard to that mule will not be appealed to the higher courts.

BROADWAY AND SIDE STREETS

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(UP)—The production of "Lean Harvest" by Kenneth Macgowan and Joseph Verner Reed adds notably to the credit side of the New York season, marking the third time in recent weeks that a successful London play has been transferred auspiciously to Broadway.

Ronald Jeans, the author of "Lean Harvest," has written an entertaining and witty play about an old theme—money does not bring happiness. The plot tells the story of Nigel, who works his way brother Steven remains poor. Nigel's wealth demands all his time and he loses the love of his wife, who runs away with an entertaining chap who can make her life a little happier. When Nigel dies, a nervous wreck, his money goes to Steven, and here the playwright leaves the story, indicating that the wealth will wreck his poor, but comparatively happy, existance just as it did for Nigel.

The play served to introduce a very talented actor, Nigel Bruce, to New York. His work and that of the well-liked Leslie Banks contrived to give the play every advantage to appear at its best. Vera Allen was another outstanding player in a large cast.

The latst exposition of the "oh, yeah" school of dramaturgy is "Two Seconds," which relates the thoughts that might flash across the brain of a man as he is being executed in the electric chair. The first act seems smooth and entertaining enough. John and Bud are roommates, employed as steel workers on a skyscraper John is tricked into marriage by a no-good dancehall girl, and Bud doesn't like it. The two men quarrel while at work and Bud falls to his death.

John loses his nerve, his job and his money. His wife goes back to her lover and supports John and herself on her illicit gains. Here things begin to go to pieces. There is no apparent reason why the wife should stick with John, as she doesn't give a rap for him. John, admittedly an illiterate man, suddenly begins to rave about salvaging his soul in a teacup, and about the higher things of life. He squares things by killing his wife.

Edward Pawley, as John, gives a fine performance in the first act, but in the second, when he is called upon to do a little heavy emoting, he rants and tears scenery in a style that would have pleased audiences of 100 years ago. Blyth Daly makes the dancehall girl a sufficiently repulsive character, and Preston Foster is excellent as Bud.

William A. Brady will win no laurels for producing "A Church Mouse," adapted from the Hungarian play by Ladislaus Foder. It is the old Cinderella theme about the unlovely secretary who blossoms out as a beauty in the right clothing and atmosphere to win the undying love of her boss. The only saving grace is he playing of Ruth Gordon as the secretary. Bert Lytell is good as the employer.

The Shuberts thought it would be a swell idea to make a musical comedy from their successful play of last season known as "Up Pops the Devil." They probably know better by now, because the result, labelled "Everybody Welcome," is pretty tepid stuff. The cast includes such musical show standbys as Oscar Shaw, Frances Williams and Ann Pennigton, but they can't do much with what they have.

Own Your Own Home Drive Set For December 1

National Board Reveals Re-adjustment of Family Budget Secret

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—(UP)—Real estate men have been investigationg the larders of American families, exxamining their laundry bills and checking on the number of times the children attend the movies, in an effort to determine whether there are more funds for home owning than are now being diverted into that field.

Results of the investigation reveal that many more families could buy, or build homes, if they recognized budgets, the National Association of Real Estate Boards announced, together with the naming of Dec. 1 as National Home Savings Day. On this day people throughout the country will be urged from a new angle to become their own landlords.

The new approach is the plan the association has worked out under which low salaried families can save for home buying or building, without changing their present living standards.

Members of the real estate association in 600 cities, banks and other agencies will use the study on family spending habits to show prospects how to assemble the money for their own domiciles.

Definite suggestions, directed chiefly to women, and backed by figures that have nothing to do with real estate, but go into the family expenditures for essentials, will be distributed the morning of Dec. 1 in hundreds of communities and cities.

Farmers to Lead In Agricultural Convention Meet

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., — (UP)—"Dirt farmers" of San Mateo county are to have a direct voice in a California campaign to improve agricultural conditions.

This "ouen forum" plan will be the basis on which the program of the state-wide farmers' convention to be held in Sacramento December 2, 3 and 4, according to Dudley Moulton, state director of agriculture who called the conference.

Because the marketing of farms products is conceded to be the most serious problem of the growers, this phase of the industry will be given primary consideration at the convention.

"It will be necessary to first find out what is wrong with our marketing system, and then determine what can be done about it and on whom the responsibility rests for improving conditions," Moulton said.

Every known agency, including federal, state, municipal and private organizations will be asked to appear before the farmers and tell them definitely how they can help and just how far they will go in improving marketing facilities.

Out of this discussion as well as from the discussions relative to taxes, finances, tariff and other problems of interest to the farmers, it is felt by the convention committee that some definite workable program can be outlned to guide the state department and the farming industry of California.

The department of agriculture is asking every farmer in the state to attend and take an active part in all conferences. The meetings will be conducted by the farmers themselves, and not by agricultural officials as has been the rule in previous years, it was announced. Only farmer deligates will have a vote on whatever action is taken by the convention.

Railroads are offering special reduced rates for the convention.

State Gaining In Ability to Read and Write

By HOMER L. ROBERTS

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Cal., — (UP)— More Californians are able to read and write today than ever before.

This was disclosed in an analysis of the federal census reports by the state department of education. The total number of illiterate persons in the state is 124,810 as compared with 95,592 in 1920, the report showed. This was a reduction from 3.3 per cent to 2.6 per cent of the population.

In San Mateo county there are 1,472 persons unable to read or write, as compared with 964 in 1920. The per centage of illiteracy is now 2.3 per cent, as compared with 3.2 per cent 10 years ago.

Mexicans, who form 6.5 per cent of California's population, prevented the state from achieving a still more favorable illiteracy rate, the state educators said.

Even counting this race, however, California, with its percentage of 2.6 er cent was well below the figure of 4.3 per cent for the entire United States.

Twenty-one counties in California were higher than the percentage for the entire United States, while 37 of the 58 counties of the state were above he average of 2.6 for the state.

The counties showing the best illiteracy percentages, or lower than the state average, were Alameda, Butte, El Dorado, Glenn, Lake Los Angeles, Marin, Mariposa, Mendocino, Nevada, Orange, San Diego, San Francisco, San Mateo, Shasta, Solano, Stanislaus, Sutter, Tthama, Trinity and Tuolumne.

Long Beach boasted of the lowest proportion of illiteracy in California —or in the entire United States, for that matter—with its rate of five-enths of one-per cen. The highest was in Alpine, California's smallest county. Here the percentage unable to read or write was 28.6 or more than one-forth its population of school age.

ECONOMY WITH EFFICIENCY IN SCHOOLS URGED

County Teachers Hear Dr. Staffelbach At Meeting

Standards of education should be upheld during periods of economic depression by increased administrative efficiency, Dr. Elmer Staffelbach of San Jose State Teachers' College told members of the San Mateo County Teachers Association in his address on "School Economies" at their fall meeting at Sequoia Union High School last night.

Dr. Staffelbach, who is research representative of the California Teachers' Association and head of the commercial department of San Jose State Teachers' College, stated that education is one field which must not suffer a loss of efficiency because of general financial stringency. Balancing of teaching loads through perfected methods of administration was his suggestion for minimizing cost per pupil without sacrificing present high standards of education.

Social Service Urged

Henry C. Hall, district superintendent of schools of San Bruno and secretary of the county teachers' association, said in his talk on "Social Service" that the teacher should make himself so valuable to his community as a constructive builder that he should receive in return the cooperation of the community in worthy enterprises. He particularly urged the participation of teachers in the direction of young people's activities.

A. C. Argo, principal of Sequoia high school and president of the county association, presided at the meeting. He introduced Roy W. Cloud of Redwood City, secretary of the California Teachers' Association; C. S. Morris, dean of San Mateo Junior College; Miss Pansy Jewett Abbott, county superintendent of schools of San Mateo county, and Sumner Dean, vice president of the association.

Plan Group Insurance

A preliminary report was made on the proposed plan for group insurance to be undertaken by the county teachers' association by representatives of a casualty insurance company. It was announced that 75 per cent of the association members must subscribe to the plan if it is to be accepted.

Every district of San Mateo county was represented at last night's meeting, which was attended by approximately 240 teachers from elementary and high schools and San Mateo Junior College.

Musical entertainment was provided by a 12-piece ensemble from the San Mateo Junior College theatre orchestra under the direction of Elmer H. Young.

Unreserved Seats For Bear-Husky Contest

BERKELEY, Oct. 29—A substantial slash in the price of tickets for the California-Washington football game to be played at Berkeley, November 7, has been made possible by action of the executive committee of the Associated Students in designating 22 sections of California Memorial Stadium as unreserved sections for this game, according to announcement today by W. W. Monahan, graduate manager.

General admission tickets will sell at $1.50, starting this Saturday, at all regular California agencies in San Francisco, Oakland and Berkeley. Seats between the goallines will continue to sell at the established reserved-seat price of $2.50, Monahan declared.

The reduced rate will admit spectators to unreserved sections at the ends of the stadium: Sections CC through W at the north end, and sections JJ through P at the south.

Persons who have already purchased reserved seats in these sections will be given a rebate on presenting their tickets at the A. S. U. C. ticket department on the Berkeley campus, the committee has ruled.

Fine Tobacco Crop Reported

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—(UP)—Regular but gentle rains, the principal climatic necessity for "vintage" tobacco crops, have crowded this year's cigar tobacco market with leaf of the finest quality, according to John H. Duys, president of the Associated Cigar Manufacturers and Leaf Tobacco Dealers. Since returning from the annual auctions of Java and Sumatra tobacco at Amsterdam, Duys has inspected Connecticut's recently harvested bumper tobacco crop.

Heavy rains, or storms, tear the delicate tobacco leaves, but the plants need much ground water in order to absorb the minerals—principally derivatives of potassium—which make a cigar burn evenly and hold its fire.

Good Havana tobacco has declined so seriously in price that Cuban planters have agreed to limit the crop next year. There even have been serious suggestions that the crop be entirely abandoned to allow the market to catch up with the supply. Last year's Java was a "vintage" crop like that of 1926 and the Sumatra outlook is so good that the price has not been seriously affected by last year's disappointing crop.
